From these facts it is possible that the sex may be determined in the ovaries before fertilization. Male eggs do not require fertilization, and therefore can develop when laid by a drone-layer, but the female eggs of a drone-layer require fertilization, and since they do not get it they die. I am as yet unable to give an exact ratio between the number of eggs which develop and those that do not, owing to difficulties in observation, but of the fact that some do not develop I am sure. Of course, it will be recognized that this is but a theory with a somewhat small basis of fact, but the facts observed seem to me to be enough to throw doubt on the second part of the Dzierzon theory--that sex depends on fertilization. For fear of being misunderstood, let me repeat that my observations confirm the view that drone eggs are unfertilized, so that the first part of the Dzierzon theory remains unchallenged, as far as I am concerned. The entire subject of the parthenogenetic development of the drones is still but little understood. A few facts are well known, but around these facts there has been woven a mass of good and bad guesses which must be cleared up. If the theory could be stripped of these surmises, the whole subject would be much clearer; and one who undertakes to work on this line must drop all...
