It is then cut fine with a case knife, and stirred at intervals for one-half to threequarters of an hour suificiently to keep the curd from matting under the whey. When the cubes are quite firm the whey is poured off and the curd left to mat at the bottom of the bottles if the old form of apparatus is used. The best tests are made when the separation of the whey is most complete. By allowing the samples to stand for a short time, more whey can be poured ofi, and the curd thereby rendered firmer. The water around the jars is kept at a. temperature of 98, the vat is cov ered, and the curds allowed to ferment in the sample jars for six to twelve hours. During this time the impurities in any particular sample will cause gases to be developed in the curds so that by examining these, by smelling of them and cutting them with a sharp knife, those having a bad flavor, or a spongy or in any way abnormal texture may be easily detected, and thus traced to the milk causing the trouble. Since the curd test was first described, several modi fications have been...
