Excerpt: . CHAPTER I. Tobacco And Its Bondage. This work is a fragmentary narration of personal experiences in a tobacco thralldom that lasted more than thirty years, together with a digest of the thoughts and conclusions which came to me during that period and since my emancipation. I trust it may furnish some additional evidence to temperance people who affirm the close inter-relation between rum and tobacco, while awakening inquiry on the part of sincere reformers who have not as yet clearly seen their intimate connection. I also desire to say something that shall aid in keeping young fellows from getting into the tobacco habit while helping old ones to get out. I make no appeal to middle-aged men who have not contracted the habit, for the reason that this addiction is rarely formed after a man has passed twenty-five. In the case of those...
