He loved it all the more because he was a cripple. The game was more beautiful and wonderful to him because he would never be able to play it. For Willie had been born with one leg shorter than the other; he could not run and at 11 years of age it was all he could do to walk with a crutch. Nevertheless Willie knew more about baseball than any other boy on Maddens Hill. An uncle of his had once been a ballplayer and he had taught Willie the fine points of the game. And this uncles ballplayer friends, who occasionally visited him, had imparted to Willie the vernacular of the game. So that Willies knowledge of players and play, and particularly of the strange talk, the wild and whirling words on the lips of the real baseball men, made him the envy of every boy on Maddens Hill, and a mine of information. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
