It is thus in no sense a treatise. Because of the limited time allotted to the subjects of sound and light in the present distribution of studies at the Academy, the problem of arranging a fundamental course of sufficient strength, to be something more than popular, and yet to be mastered within the allotted time, has been somewhat perplexing. The basis of this arrangement is necessarily the mathematical attainments of the class for which the course is intended. In this respect, the class has completed the study of elementary Mathematics, as far as to include the Calculus, and has had a four months study of the application of pure...
